David Solomon One of the biggest questions people have about life on Earth, What happens next? What happens after death? In The Chronicles of the Dead Saints, David Solomon answers this universal question in detail through extensive research and groundbreaking rethinking of the near-death phenomenon (NDE). Drawing on the voluminous body of NDE literature and the testimonies of more than 5,000 NDE survivors (or Dead Saints), Solomon answers millennial Christian questions about salvation, death, sin, heaven, hell, Jesus, and immortality. His main conclusion? The heavens are real, though not connected to the clouds, harps and pearl gates of popular Christian culture. Having studied NDEs throughout his life, Solomon's quest to explore this topic was accelerated by the diagnosis of terminal glioblastoma brain cancer in 2013. His personal views on death and death, which are woven throughout the book, give his message an irresistible relevance and immediacy. Provocative, complex, exciting, and reassuring is its part educational volume, part guide, and part memoir. The Chronicles of the Dead Saints are unlike anything written to date. Designed for readers of all types, backgrounds and creeds, it dispels widespread myths and fears, providing a clear path to personal growth and enlightenment in this world and into the next. This letter is another focus introductionThis book is an attempt to explore and explore life after death as a kind of scientific effort. Of course, this is something too rare. About 151,600 people die on this planet every day. The letter consists of various presentations of near-death experiences (NDE) and dreams organized to document the existence of the afterlife. The author seeks to merge the recurring similarities from NDE into a steady picture of the afterlife. This letter is further emphasized by the fact that the author himself was in the process of dying at the time of writing the book. Did the Apostle Paul have a close experience of death? The author equates the commonalities of the NDE experience with Paul's transformative experience, as it relates to the Bible. The author refers to the following similarities: (1) that people return from the NDE with the absolute knowledge of the immortality of the soul, (2) that people experience Christ in their NDE as a being of light, (3) that people return from the NDE with a complete loss of fear of death, and (4) that people return from the NDE with a sense of urgency to fulfill their mission on earth. Like the experience of the Apostle Paul, many NDEs are born-again revelations in which a person acquires the pursuit of mercy, service, and love for all humanity. The importance to the purity of ThoughtOne is the consistent aspect of NDE is the nonverbal, telepathic kind of communication that occurs with those who are encountered. Because this is a situation where all thoughts are essentially exchanged, this is an example of a complete absence of untruth, for nothing can be hidden. After reading these NDE, one is left with the feeling that the mind becomes something of an open book in the spiritual realm; hence the need for purity of thought. Instead of hearing only what people want to reveal, everything is known; all thoughts and hearts are openly divided. Just as God knows your heart, so is your heart openly exposed to spiritual influence. Those present are described as joyful, carefree, peaceful, loving and innocent as a child. Of course, in the scriptures Jesus equates thinking to action, as in Matthew 5:28, where Jesus observes, But I tell you that everyone who looks at a woman has lustfully already committed adultery with her in his heart. We must learn to think with the higher mind, not with the help of animal instinct. We must even think about what we say to ourselves and learn to plant thoughts of love and forgiveness instead of anger, doubt, and hatred. This process is nothing more than a transformation of our consciousness. In each of us there is this hidden love, waiting for it to be unwrapped, waiting for us to be brought up. This love aspires to be not only the person who contains it, but also other people around him. When we love each other mutually, nurturing love in each other, we refuse to let love die because the rant of love by infusions from each other sustains the eternal, growing presence of love that is consolidated in the mind of Jesus. Earth University In Galatians 5:22-23. Paul reports that the fruits of the spirit are love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, loyalty, gentleness, and self-control. It is obvious that today there is a shortage of these fruits in the minds of mankind. One of the themes of this book is that we exist here on Earth to get to know these things better. In fact, this author often refers to the planet as the University of the Earth, saying this: Some people sleep through their classes. Others are awake, paying attention, taking note, learning old tests, learning the right answers when the teacher calls them. When we decide to pay attention and participate in our lessons with purpose, life takes on a new meaning. -David Solomon And also the author quotes directly from the NDE testimony: I was told the Earth is like a great school, a place where you can apply spiritual lessons and test yourself, under pressure to see if you can really live, that you already know what you should do. From what I've seen and heard there... On the other hand... it's all about relationships and taking care of each other. One of the goals in life is to learn to manage and nurture the material body so that it can be loved without giving up the demands of the materialism from which it originated. We have to cultivate our thoughts. The garden we have to cultivate there are gardens we build inside ourselves. It seems that every thought and action builds a garden in our hearts and minds. Every event and every thought influences our lives and the lives of the people around us. There is great power in articulating our thoughts. Our enduring spirit is made up of who we are. In an environment where all thoughts are open and shared, we have to ask ourselves what is within us, what is the pleasure to share? We must cultivate love so that we can bring it into this kind of spiritual exchange. If we despise such love and interaction, we will be uncomfortable in heaven. If we insist on the cultivation of hatred, jealousy and deceit, we will be uncomfortable in the heart. Negative habits become chains. If you enjoy anger, hatred, self-centeredness, obsessions, psychological attachments, and similar spiritual ugliness, then this is what you naturally gravitate towards in the spiritual realm. That's where you'll be most comfortable. Whatever it is that you are long in the heavenly realm, you must be current now, and looking after now, while the earth is alive. The state of our hearts, not our religion, is what lays the foundation for the realm of the afterlife that we will experience. God's Grace Your hearts desire, its just that some desires are harmful things. Another sequence in NDE is to experience the afterlife shape as essentially light. We seem to transform matter into a sustainable light. Somehow, our life, our birth, our growth, entails this process of liquefaction of light from the materials of the universe. If we ascend from one cell to a fully intelligent person, this transition shows the growth and maturity of a spiritual life form that rises from dust, goes beyond unreasonable life forms and potentially blossoms into a being of light. The earth is like a womb, nurturing the growth of the beings of light from which they eventually rise to fill the spiritual kingdom. This process involves colonizing or transforming matter into a light-spirit, a process visible in the external expansion of light, as light consumes darkness. The nature of God is to love and create loving beings. We are created from dust and grow forward into loving spiritual beings. Plans of ExistenceSed presents the idea that existence is multifaceted and manifests itself at different levels of spiritual maturity, quoting Jesus: There are many mansions in the House of My Father. These levels are divided into the ability to love, not any dogma, rituals or confessional. We gravitate towards an area that is right for our character. Blindness is our tendency to strive for worldly glory and things as an acceptable state of being, rather than for the upbringing of our spiritual existence. We must realize the state of love that we exude and be committed to bringing that love forward. Only at first, when we realize the lesson, we give ourselves a chance to master it. Some of the things we need to learn are perseverance, consistency, organization, purity, discipline, focus, prayer, awareness, care, kindness, communication, truthfulness, sociability, attentiveness, etc. The author suggests we eventually land on the stage in which we are most comfortable, as expressed in the following NDE of the book: They came to the first floor, in the ballroom, dressed up to the hit, and danced and danced and danced. The ballroom was filled with all dressed in fancy dresses and regalia of any color, smiling, laughing, and having fun. I knew they had already been saved because salvation was available to all who lived in the Mansion. At the back of the ballroom, there was an elevator that would take ballroom dancers to a higher level of eternal life, but very few decided to go up. -NDE Ballroom dancers can connect to Grace at any time to remove the burden of their sins; however, once they connect to Grace, they have an additional opportunity to grow if they decide to take advantage of it, but many do not notice and do not ignore this opportunity. The quoted NDE suggest that the level of heaven we enter is determined by the magnitude of unconditional love we exude, the purity of our hearts, and to which we are free from fear. Conclusion - Explanation of the author's evil explanation of the author of evil in the world three times: (1) That the soul chooses its own brand of suffering before appearing in the world. Some prefer to come into life with a very difficult schedule of lessons involving lessons that seem terrible on earth. (2) This earthly life is only a flash of moment compared to our eternal existence, making evil less consistent than we might otherwise perceive. (3) Referring to Proverbs 16:4 and Isaiah 45:7, the author suggests that some of the wicked and catastrophes were made for the specific purpose of schooling. Perhaps the best biblical reference is in the Romans 9, perhaps suggesting that some people are made solely for this purpose : For Scripture says to the pharaoh: I raised you for this very purpose, that I could show my power in you, and that my name can be proclaimed all over the earth . Therefore, God will spare whom He wants mercy, and He tempers whom he wants to harden. One of you will say to me, Then why does God still blame us? For who is capable of resisting His will? But who are you, man, to speak to God? Will what is shaped to say to the one who shaped it. Why did you make me like this? Doesn't a potter have the right to make from the same piece of clay some pottery for special purposes, and some for public use? What if God, though he decided to show his anger and make his power known, carried with great patience objects of his wrath, prepared for destruction? -Romans 9:17-22This the scriptures become more illuminated when we think about it combined with the need to control our thoughts. If we persist in unhealthy thoughts, we restrain our spiritual development and agree to maintain a material form of appetite. To be other than a discarded clay vessel, we must become a vessel capable of containing the best thoughts. If we remain clay, keeping unhealthy thoughts, we do not blossom in spirit, but wither. Conversely, if our thoughts, actions, and desires become cleaner, we carry a spiritual inexistence. Some of them will stay clay and withers away. Grace is active, but many will simply be satisfied with the Graceful Party. Fewer people will take to the test of becoming ever brighter than spiritual beings. ... More... More
